Having been very keen to install solar panels for some time, my initial concerns' were how to find a quality reliable company out of the hundreds of unknown start ups out there.

When I discovered that G Harrison Electrical was a registered installer, it took me no time at all to make a decision to go ahead with the installation, having first hand knowledge of the reputation and quality of the company's work on large & small electrical contracts.

On the day of installation everything went from start to finish far better than we had hoped. From initially sheeting up the house to gain access to the loft, to tidying up afterwards and providing an induction on how the system would work on completion.

All four installers were polite, professional and kept us well informed regarding the whole process and it was even difficult to tell the difference between the team leader and the others as they all appeared to take equal pride and ownership in the company's work. I even felt compelled afterwards to telephone and thank the associated scaffolding company as they too were some of the best I had experienced.

Having now had a few weeks to review the system it is functioning better than expected and the return on investment appears easily achievable so I would happily recommend solar panel installations & G.Harrison Electrical to anyone.
